NORTH SHORE HEALTH DEPARTMENT

March is that time of year where many people have already started thinking about spring break vacation. Spring break is a great time to travel and have fun, but also a time to be alert to the dangers associated with it. With popular destinations where certain diseases are on the rise such as the Zika Virus, it is important for everyone to be prepared for safe travel.

What is Zika Virus?

Zika virus is a disease that is spread to people through the bite of an infected Aedes species mosquito. The most common symptoms of Zika are fever, rash, joint pain, and conjunctivitis (red eyes). A possible link between birth defects and the Zika virus are still being investigated and pregnant women are still on high alert. At the moment there is no vaccine to prevent this virus; if you plan on traveling it is best to follow these tips:

- Prevent mosquito bites by wearing long sleeved clothing, stay in places with air conditioning, use insect repellants, treat clothing and gear with permethrin, etc.
- Practice safe sex as Zika may be transmitted sexually.
- The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) recommends pregnant women in any trimester should consider postponing travel to any area where Zika virus is spreading.
- If you plan on traveling discuss it with your healthcare provider.

Follow these basic health and safety tips for your next vacation:

- Visit a travel clinic and get your required vaccinations.
- Protect yourself from the sun and always wear sunscreen with at least SPF 15. For eye protection, wear wraparound sunglasses that provide 100 percent UV ray protection.
- Protect yourself from unintentional injuries by limiting alcohol intake, wearing the appropriate gear during activities, and knowing how to swim.

Weekly Health Tips

Is your energy lagging? Though it maybe the last thing you feel like doing when you're tired, exercise—even a brisk walk—can be more effective than a nap or cup of coffee at fighting fatigue.

Community Psychology at Alverno College and teaches graduate and undergraduate courses in the areas of research, evaluation, and statistics.

Health department staff attended several ongoing group meetings regarding Emergency Preparedness. The North Shore Health Department prepares for public health emergencies, such as pandemic flu or a bioterrorist attack, by discussing, planning, training for, and exercising these situations. Many of the meetings are regional, involving other health departments, healthcare providers, emergency management, and emergency response teams in the North Shore, Milwaukee County, Southeastern Wisconsin, or the State. Our written plans, collaborations with others, and practice exercises help to keep our communities safe, and to aid in returning our communities to normalcy after such an event.

A public health nurse attended an educational program by Sanofi Pasteur on Influenza Prevention. The program included information on the effects of influenza in the older population and the efficacy of a high dose influenza vaccine for individuals 65 years and older.
